

NO PA TODAY
Jag TV Script for February 2nd, 2022
[Intro and Pledge from DDR]

Anchor 1: Good Morning Jags and Welcome back to Jag TV!
I'm anchor 1.

Anchor 2: And I'm anchor 2. Happy two's day everybody!
Today is Tuesday, February 22nd, 2022. Or as you would write it, two, twenty-two, twenty-two.

Anchor 1: This is called a palindrome meaning it reads the same forward and backward. It also falls on a Tuesday, which is now referred to as Twosday. It's the most exceptional date in over a decade, It's a ubiquitous palindrome date because it's a palindrome when it's written in the US format of month, day, year, and the format most other countries follow of day, month,
year, The last time there was a ubiquitous six-digit palindrome
date was November 11, 2011.

Anchor 2: So make sure to celebrate the coolest day of the year!
Now let's get to our announcements!

[Back to main for anchors]

Anchor 2: And we are back in time for our moment in Black History! Today we will be celebrating Jonas Savimbi, Angolan politician, the leader of a long-continuing guerrilla insurgency against the post-independence government of Angola.

Anchor 1: Savimbi was educated in mission schools and won a scholarship to study abroad. He studied medicine at the University of Lisbon in Portugal and then obtained a doctorate in political science at the University of Lausanne, Switzerland.

Anchor 2: Savimbi was the only Angolan guerrilla leader who continued fighting within Angola until the nation reached independence from Portugal in 1975. By this time he had expanded his initially small band of supporters into a guerrilla army numbering in the thousands. UNITA was based in southeastern Angola and relied for its support on the Ovimbundu people, the largest ethnic group in the country.

Anchor 1: Savimbi continued to wage a disruptive war against the MPLA throughout the 1970s and '80s. In 1991 he signed a peace agreement with the MPLA-led Angolan government that halted the civil war and resulted in free, multiparty national elections in 1992. Savimbi was officially designated leader of the opposition in 1997.

Anchor 2: Savimbi faced opposition from within UNITA in September 1998 when a group calling itself UNITA-R suspended him and became the self-declared leader.

Nevertheless, Savimbi requested the renewal of negotiations in March 2001, and he further indicated a willingness to accept the terms of the Lusaka Accord. While the government demanded a cease-fire as a condition for initiating new talks and Savimbi called for the Roman Catholic church to mediate the dispute, fighting continued throughout 2001 and spilled into the neighboring countries of Zambia and Namibia. Government troops continued to pursue Savimbi and finally caught up with him in the eastern province of Moxico.

Anchor 1: After Savimbi's death, which happened on February 22nd, 2002, a peace agreement between UNITA and the Angolan government was signed in April 2002.

Anchor 2: And with that, we conclude our show. Thank you for tuning into JagTV.

Anchor 1: Remember to send any announcements you would like to air to nwjagtv@gmail.com. We hope you have a nice twosday!

BOTH: And we will see you tomorrow!
