Re:  A Motion by Mr. Hirsch to Amend the Agenda for November 9, 1982 (FAILED)

A motion by Mr. Hirsch to amend the agenda for November 9, 1982, by tabling the item on smoking areas failed with Mr. Ewing voting in the affirmative; Mr. Claypoole, Dr. Greenblatt, Mrs. Peyser, Mrs. Wallace, and Mrs. Zappone voting in the negative (Mr. Hirsch voting in the affirmative).

Resolution No. 756-82  Re:  Board Agenda – November 9, 1982

On recommendation of the superintendent and on motion of Dr.
Greenblatt seconded by Mrs. Peyser, the following resolution was adopted unanimously (Mr. Hirsch abstaining):

* Mr. Barse joined the meeting at a later time.

Resolved, That the Board of Education approve its agenda for November 9, 1982, with the change of the item on graduation requirements from discussion to discussion/action.

Re: Board Member Comments

1. Mr. Hirsch said that he had heard that one of the high schools did not have an on-the-road driving instructor, and he wondered what was going to be done about the situation.

2. Mrs. Peyser stated that she was pleased to receive the report on loss of credit, and she asked how soon they could expect the recommendations of the committee to be implemented. The superintendent explained that this was a staff committee, and parents and students were not involved. He said that he would want to hear from them, and he believed that matters of policy might be involved in these recommendations. He felt that the Board should discuss this report in January.

3. Mr. Ewing reported that he had attended the Saturday anti-Klan meeting in Woodside Park. He said that the rally was sponsored by MCEA, MCCSSE, and MCCPTA among others, and he felt that the message was clear that the Klan was not welcome in Montgomery County because the Woodside rally was better attended than the Klan rally by a factor of 50.

4. Mr. Ewing stated that he had attended the Friday dinner meeting of the Metropolitan Area Boards of Education in Arlington, Virginia. He said that each Board received a gavel and block made by the students in Arlington County, and he presented Mrs. Zappone with the gavel.

5. Mrs. Zappone reported that the Metropolitan Area Boards of Education would be holding a mini-conference on December 9. She urged Board and staff to consider attending this conference.

Re:  Board/Press/Visitor Conference

Mrs. Charlotte Joseph appeared before the Board of Education.

Re:  Gifted and Talented Advisory Committee Annual Report and Staff
Annual Report

Mrs. Diane Ippolito, chairperson, explained that gifted and talented students had been a priority of the Board of Education, and this was the eighth consecutive year the committee had given a report to the Board and superintendent. Mrs. Regina Greenspun, chairperson, explained that there were certain Board policies affecting gifted and talented students, and the committee continued to be guided by the G&T policy adopted by the Board in 1978. They tried to assure that MCPS efforts were directed toward all gifted and talented students, and they encouraged efforts in visual and performing arts. The committee also monitored new programs such as grading and reporting, uniform testing, the K-8 policy, and the senior high school policy.

Mrs. Greenspun stated that the first recommendation was to continue to implement the MCPS plan for the education of the gifted and talented which was presented to the Board in 1980. The second was to implement the recommendations of the task force to encourage students to take advanced level courses. She said they also recommended that each area have a gifted and talented advisory committee. The committee was beginning to zero in on the more difficult identification of gifted and talented students who were handicapped, non-English speaking, or minority. In curriculum and resources, the committee was quite proud of the curriculum units being developed. However, one of the problems was obtaining substitute time to train teachers to implement these programs. One of their recommendations dealt with the development of units to supplement a continuous K-12 program in computer literacy for all students. Another recommendation concerned the science and mathematics programs in the elementary schools. Mrs. Greenspun indicated that the committee would be meeting in the near future to prioritize the recommendations having budgetary implications. She said they did want to maintain the personnel they did have, but they had found that they were not serving the high schools as well as they wanted to.

Mrs. Greenspun commented that one of the problems they faced was providing transportation to existing programs. The committee supported the seven-period day for all high schools. She said that they were supporting the Burning Tree model, and they wanted to see upper level elementary magnet centers for gifted students in each administrative area. She felt that funds for staff training were crucial, and she pointed out that in 1979 they had first suggested such training for counselors. The committee thought that some person on each counseling staff should be identified as the person who could address these problems. The committee wanted to see an expansion of offerings in the visual and performing arts, and they hoped the Board would not cut the budget in the Department of Aesthetic Education. She noted that this was the first time they had not concluded their recommendations with the suggestion to continue the work of the committee because they felt that the committee was now "institutionalized."

Dr. Lois Martin, associate superintendent, stated that the staff was pleased with the continuing leadership provided by the committee and was looking forward to the priority list of recommendations. Dr. Waveline Starnes, educational planner for the gifted and talented, explained that the staff report tried to give the Board a summary of accomplishments in the past year. She felt that the addition of personnel was critical and that the .2 positions at the junior high school had had an effect. Mrs. Ippolito added that the .2 position meant having a program that was working very well because to do a program correctly they had to have someone there. Dr. Starnes agreed that the positions were crucial to the improvements they had made as well as the staff training. She said that the first section of the report talked about program planning and their emphasis on program at the elementary school level. She indicated that the task force recommendations and Board actions on advanced level courses were very important for gifted and talented programs. In regard to identification procedures, Dr. Starnes explained that they needed to address the issue of improved minority participation in gifted and talented programs. They were pleased with their small project in this area, but it was just a study and needed some additional time for final results. She said that the differentiation built into each of the curriculum areas was very important because every teacher had to do a lot of teaching of gifted and talented students.

The superintendent remarked that as he looked over the last three or four years the Board had been very supportive of programs for the gifted and talented. He said they were at the point where they needed to look at two areas. The first was the Burning Tree type of delivery of services, and the second was the area of identification of students, in particular minority youngsters. He indicated that the initial news about the project was that a more equitable selection process did result, and he hoped that this procedure could be expanded. He said that they had to make gifted and talented programs accessible to all students, especially at the secondary level. He said that they had always had the problem of students enrolling in advanced programs and getting "C's" in these courses. In addition, there were budget issues involving released time for senior high school teachers.

Mr. Claypoole commented that he had enjoyed the report and hoped there would be support for the recommendations. He agreed that there should be a program in computer literacy for all students. However, he felt that there should be particular emphasis on gifted and talented students in this program. He knew that in the elementary schools there were some students now in the third and fourth grade whose knowledge of computers exceeded that of their teachers. He inquired about the visual and performing arts and how the gifted program was incorporated into the school day. Mrs. Eoline Kukuk, coordinator of the Interrelated Arts Program, replied that in the six pilot schools the children identified the children and delivered the program, but the part of the program dealing with dance and drama was delivered by the Interrelated Arts staff. Mr. Claypoole asked whether this was an add-on, and Mrs. Kukuk explained that it was an add-on only in dance and drama.

Dr. Pitt commented that they also had an excellent summer program, and Dr. Starnes said that this was the first summer for elementary school students. Mrs. Greenspun remarked that they did not want children going to a gifted and talented program as an extra and coming back to their regular classroom and finding out they were responsible for work in the regular program.

Mr. Ewing thought they had made a lot of progress and that the committee had done a great job in providing leadership. He said they had done a great deal at the elementary and intermediate level, and in some respects the senior high school had received somewhat less attention over the years. He said that ten of the senior high schools had programs which was less than half of the total senior high schools. He requested information on which schools had programs, what those programs were, and how the progress was progressing. In regard to the Burning Tree model, Mr. Ewing said it was important for them to make sure they were doing comparative and systematic assessments of this and other delivery models. If parents concluded the Burning Tree model was good, he thought they should make this conclusion on the basis of evidence.

Dr. Cronin inquired about the criteria which determined which schools were selected for pilots and gifted and talented programs. Dr. Starnes replied that for the senior high schools these came from two sources. The area office designated certain schools, and the schools themselves indicated that they needed improvement in this area.

In regard to curriculum, Mrs. Wallace said that one of the problems with the regular curriculum was that it had to be coordinated from discipline to discipline, and she wondered how this work was going. Dr. Martin replied that they had made progress but thought they could and should make more. Mrs. Wallace felt that if they were going to have a differentiated curriculum for gifted and talented K-8 it needed to be coordinated with the regular K-8 curriculum. She had gathered that teachers were still frustrated in trying to implement the newly revised curriculum. In addition, she pointed out that under "Identification" there was a statement that the figure was too high, and she hoped that if 50 percent of their students needed gifted and talented services that these services would be provided. Dr. Starnes replied that in identifying students needing differentiated services these were 20 percent of the students, but they did want to deliver services that were needed. Mrs. Wallace suggested that they look at what other school systems were doing in this area.

Dr. Greenblatt reported that she had attended a meeting where a parent had raised a question dealing with the "pullout" program. Normally if a gifted student was taking a class in math, the other students would be taking math at the same time. However, they got into a different situation when a student was taken out for a day. She had heard that the other students were not covering any new material. Dr. Starnes replied that coordination between the regular and pullout program did take time. She said that teachers should remember that this was a day when students were going to be away. She said that the criteria for the selection of students to attend a center should be that they could miss a day at the local school. Dr. Greenblatt asked that there be some discussion of this problem.

Dr. Shoenberg stated that they were given to making the distinction between programs in visual arts and the academic programs. He said that he would assume there was some development of cognitive abilities in the visual arts programs, and he would like to see a statement regarding the relationship between the development of cognitive skills and school programs in creative and performing arts. Dr. Starnes replied that they did not have a document but would welcome a discussion about this because a great deal of effort had gone on in this area.

Dr. Cronin requested an interpretation of the committee's recommendation on math and science in the elementary schools. The superintendent indicated that he had raised the same question about whether they were recommending a separate person for math and science. Mrs. Ippolito explained that they were recommending a resource person for math and science instruction. Mrs. Greenspun explained that some teachers were doing their jobs and in some schools there would not be a need for a resource person. She felt that this might be a matter of training for the teachers. Dr. Martin suggested that the committee needed to clarify the statement. Dr. Pitt remarked that there was no question that they needed to improve science and math instruction at the elementary level. The problem was how they did this. At present they were taking good elementary school teachers, training them, and moving them to the secondary level. Mrs. Wallace inquired about departmentalization at the fifth and sixth grade level, and Dr.
Pitt replied that quite a few schools did this now. Mrs. Wallace asked that Board members be informed about strategies being used and how many schools were using the various strategies.

Mr. Hirsch remarked that the committee had written an excellent report and noted that the committee's report had been prepared before the Board's adoption of a resolution on weighted grades. Mrs. Greenspun reported that the committee was going to be able to review the work that Dr. Martin's staff was doing in implementing the resolution. Mrs. Zappone asked whether the committee had had an opportunity to look at the North Chevy Chase model or provide input. Mrs. Greenspun replied that they were going to look at the program; however, the program had been started in the summer and the committee did not have an opportunity to provide input.

The superintendent noted that this was a superintendent's advisory committee, and he would like to thank the members for their fine work.

Re: Facilities Plan Update/B-CC
Alternatives

The superintendent explained that the paper before the Board was in response to the ruling of the Maryland State Board of Education for the B-CC cluster. As a first step they were looking at three possible alternative solutions. The first was the present program, the second was the program that existed last year, and the third was a new proposal which was somewhat different. It was clear to him that since the Board's late summer decision that staff members assigned to Chevy Chase and Rosemary Hills had done a fine job in getting ready for school. However, the program at Rosemary Hills was not at present serving the educational needs of all the students in that building to the degree that they desired. He said that the Board policy was clear when it stated they had to facilitate the best instructional program for all students. He did not believe that the decision facing the Board in this area would be an easy one because the decision had to be what was in the best educational interest of all students. He said that the stability factor would also have to weigh heavily in the final decision. His recommendation was that Rosemary Hills be a Head Start - 2 school, Chevy Chase 3-6, and North Chevy Chase to be a 3-6 grade reorganized program. However, he did not know what his final recommendations would be. He noted that the state Board of Education was concerned about the timeline. They would be holding some hearings on this matter, and they intended to have round table discussions with all the schools involved to see whether they could find some agreement and a long-term stability which would satisfy all the parents. He remarked that the stability issue involved a willingness on the part of all parents to feel that they had been a part of the decision process. He did not presume to know what the best final long-term decision would be and what his final recommendations would be, but he did know that the program was not achieving the objectives for all youngsters. He would visit the school itself and meet and talk with parents. The final recommendations would be out in December, the hearings held in January, and the final decision to the state by January 31.

Mr. Barse pointed out that in the superintendent's document there was a paragraph which indicated that an evaluation of the effectiveness of the school should be an important part of the decision. The superintendent had implied there had already been a preliminary judgment made. Mr. Barse said he found it a little surprising that the superintendent would be willing to come out so strongly after two months of experience, especially in light of the summer's discussion on school effectiveness. He inquired about the status of the staff study because at a minimum they needed one year's experience to make an assessment. The superintendent replied that it would take more time than they had to implement the model, and the problem was that they did not have the luxury of that time. They had to make some professional judgments, and the reports he had were that the program was not working efficiently for all. Mr. Barse stated that he assumed there were some students for whom the instructional program was not effective. He wondered whether there was another option ofremedying that problem without the necessary of tearing up the whole program. The superintendent indicated that any answer that could be worked out effectively with the staff and parents would be desirable at this point. He noted that this was a preliminary recommendation, and he had a lot of research to do. He had talked with the president of the PTA at Chevy Chase Elementary who had suggested round table discussions, and he pointed out that the state Board resolution required that alternatives be considered.

Dr. Cronin remarked that it was important to consider the superintendent's statements. He felt that there had to be a round table discussion. He said that he would like them to consider another solution which was returning the North Chevy Chase program to the North Chevy Chase building, bringing a special computer program into Rosemary Hills, and leaving Rosemary Hills a K-6 school with the resources to create an excellent learning situation. The superintendent indicated that the resident population of Rosemary Hills would be 95 percent minority, and the draw of a magnet program would have to be extremely effective. Dr. Cronin inquired about some boundary adjustments, and the superintendent replied that there was that possibility.

Mr. Claypool remarked that he wished the superintendent had visited Rosemary Hills before issuing his recommendation. He felt that there was something in the language of the recommendations that could lead one to the wrong conclusions. He thought that to evaluate a plan after only eight weeks was a little premature. The superintendent agreed that they would have liked more time to look at the program; however, they were under deadline from the state Board of Education.

Mrs. Wallace stated that was another possibility they might want to consider, and that was making Rosemary Hills K-2 with the model school 3-6. This would give them a more structured situation at the lower elementary level. The superintendent replied that it was a valid suggestion, but it excluded the Chevy Chase students.

Mr. Ewing commented that it was important for the Board to remember that while the issue was the quality of educational instruction that issue was not divorced from the extent to which the Board was able to avoid racial isolation and placing the burden of integration on minority students. He said that they had to come up with a solution which assured the state Board of Education that they had not created a segregated school. He thought they needed stability, but not at the expense of minority students. He said that the superintendent had done a good job of looking at alternatives, and he was convinced they could achieve a solution that would be stable but not necessarily please everyone. He felt that everyone had to give a little, and there should be some willingness to compromise. He hoped the Board would enter into the process with the notion of finding stability, quality instruction, and the assurance that they did not have racial isolation.

Mrs. Peyser commented that she was disturbed about the recommendation because it was extremely disruptive. She was not happy that the program at Rosemary Hills was not working for all students, but she was sure that the excellent staff there could think of ways to resolve the problem. She hoped that they were not overlooking how disruptive the plan was to the Rollingwood community. Mr. Barse remarked that there was no intention of creating a segregated school at Rosemary Hills and, in fact, they were all trying to avoid this. There was every intention of assuring that there was not a disproportionate burden on minority students. He pointed out that more than 300 white students were being transported, and 200 minority students was not a disproportionate number. He said the original plan was voluntary only in the sense the Board adopted it in 1976. None of the plans had been voluntary with respect to the students and parents involved. He felt that what they had now was a reasonable and equitable plan.
