RESOLUTION NO. 411-02  Re: HISPANIC HERITAGE MONTH

On recommendation of the Superintendent and on motion of Ms. Cox seconded by Mrs. King, the following resolution was adopted unanimously:

WHEREAS, On August 17, 1988, the United States Congress by joint resolution authorized the President to proclaim annually the period beginning September 15 and ending on October 15 as National Hispanic Heritage Month; and

WHEREAS, In the more than five (5) centuries since the historic encounter between the civilizations of the Old and New Worlds, Hispanic Americans have greatly enhanced the richness of our national character, our language, and our traditions by contributing their unique blend of African, European, and North and South Native American cultures; and

WHEREAS, As the largest ethnic group in the United States, Hispanic Americans also have played a major role in building this nation into one of the greatest of all nations; and

WHEREAS, The continued successful educational efforts of Hispanic American students and partnerships with Hispanic parents, staff, and community members contribute to the present and future success of Montgomery County, the State of Maryland, and our nation as a whole; now therefore be it

Resolved, That on behalf of the superintendent, parents, and staff of Montgomery County Public Schools, the members of the Board of Education hereby declare the period of September 15 to October 15, 2002, to be observed as Hispanic Heritage Month.
Mrs. King mentioned that she spent several days visiting schools, and she wished the general community could see what she saw. In observing the classrooms and teachers, who had had training during the summer, she could see great things happening now that everyone is aligned with the same educational goals.

Mrs. O’Neill thought the opening of schools was wonderful, and the teachers and students were working hard from the first day, especially those with the extended learning opportunity (ELO) experience over the summer. All the essential questions were put on the wall in every classroom throughout the county, and instructional consistency is obvious to the casual observer. Also, with new enrollees are coming into all schools every day, the enrollment could surpass the projection.

Ms. Cox noted that it is exciting at the beginning of the school year, and there are many new things happening in the schools. She read a letter from a student who had served as an opera production manager and was forwarding wisdom and knowledge to her successor.

Dr. Weast commented that a recent article in The Washington Post reported that many families are hard pressed to provide the school supplies that their children need. MCPS is very grateful to companies such as Office Depot, which recently donated 500 backpacks filled with supplies to students at Harmony Hills Elementary School. This is the third year that Office Depot has donated supplies and backpacks. Equally impressive is a partnership between Jones Lane and Glen Haven elementary schools. The PTA at Jones Lane collected 220 backpacks and Jones Lane students packed each bag with new school supplies, along with a personal note to the Glen Haven students who would receive them. Some of the backpacks were reserved for low-income students at Jones Lane who needed them.

Also, last Thursday, Mrs. O’Neill and he joined County Executive Doug Duncan in a press conference to announce the distribution of NOAA Weather Radios to all public and private schools in the county, as well as Montgomery College. The nearly 500 radios were acquired through state and federal funds. They are programmed to receive early storm warnings from the National Weather Service. The radios also provide an automated alert system for other emergencies. They will significantly enhance school safety by improving communications at critical times, particularly when electrical power is not available.

Dr. Weast added that with the announcement this summer of 14 additional National Merit Scholarship winners, the number of Merit Scholarships for 2002 graduates has reached 57. This is 10 more than the previous year’s total of 47. The MCPS students won 38 percent of the 149 Merit Scholarships awarded in Maryland.

Mr. Abrams noted that Congresswoman Connie Morella had help MCPS obtain six million dollars in federal grants.

Mr. Felton congratulated the staff for a successful school opening. There are still adjustments with personnel and students. He is proud and appreciates the work of the superintendent and staff.

Re: DIALOGUE ON CURRENT ISSUES – SAT Scores

Mr. Abrams said there had been some coverage of the SAT scores, but it focused on the same old stories. MCPS has made a significant effort to become a data-driven system – to learn from and disaggregate the data. Although not a perfect instrument, the SAT is the longest and most consistent data available to the school system. There is a relationship between early interventions and the SAT on a disaggregated basis, especially for those students who have been in MCPS for their entire school career. Students in the Class of 2001 were in kindergarten in 1985. He thought it was important because (1) the issues are not new and (2) the data could be a predictor. What is new is the ability of the school system to correlate the activities that took place and the outcomes. He hoped that this and other discussions will make MCPS a bold system and lay down a marker. If this occurs, the system stays on a course, and the students stay in MCPS, the school system can predict the outcomes in subcategories, and the community can hold MCPS to that standard. This discussion is important to MCPS, and it is important nationally. With all the rhetoric on testing and accountability, there is no uniformity of measurement or basis to help the public ascertain whether school systems are performing to the desired level of accountability.

Mr. Felton also was concerned as MCPS moves forward with the Call to Action and initiatives in terms of value-added programs. When students come from families where there is support, the students will do well in school. The community is focused on the specific value-added initiatives in MCPS that will have an impact on student learning.

Dr. Lacey stated that (1) the activities are important, (2) MCPS does have predictors, and (3) family involvement is essential. The Board of Education approved the System of Shared Accountability and the equity analysis. Course work is critical. Without honor classes, SAT scores fluctuate 200 points between ethnic groups.

Mr. Abrams asked what were the characteristics of the training or resources that distinguished those scores, other than racial/ethnic classification. Dr. Lacey replied that the factors include the expectations of educators, the rigor in non-honors classes, poverty, the preparation for the SAT, and the quality of the teachers.

Mr. Felton referred to a study that was done four to five years ago that showed that the expectations of the teachers were essential to student learning. Dr. Weast replied that there is an expectation-based training program for all employees. The school system has proved that outcomes can be predicted. It is essential to find the gap before it can be closed, and the gap has been found to start early in a child’s education. Furthermore, there is poverty, especially in the minority population, which makes a huge difference in access; one out of four African American children does not enroll in MCPS until high school; and 40 percent of the children do not attend only MCPS.

Dr. Weast had a chart that showed two sets of curves – (1) African-American/Hispanic and
(2) Asian/White. What was found is that students need (1) more rigor, even in the elementary grades (addressed through the K-1 curriculum); (2) consistency in instruction materials/textbooks (addressed through systemwide textbooks); and a more directed instructional approach (addressed through ELO). Furthermore, 80 percent of children who have these issues live in 56 attendance areas out of the 191 schools. Especially at those 56 schools, the school system must ensure that the textbooks and instruction are consistent. Training and incentives for teachers will ensure retention of quality teachers within those 56 schools.

Ms. Cox noted that assessments are the piece that causes teachers to review their expectations in terms of student outcomes and identify the areas for intervention.

Mr. Abrams referred to the differentiation in math and reading that is occurring earlier in a student’s career. Therefore, the students who were not encouraged to take honors courses can be identified.

Mr. Burnett remarked that students can opt into honors courses without teacher recommendations. Mr. Felton stated that most of the initiatives have occurred recently.

Mr. Abrams replied that was the point, and the research only received lip service until recently. If the school system stays the course, when will changes occur in the SAT scores? Students receiving the initiatives will be in high school in 2010. One of the challenges is what happens in the meantime for students who have not received the initiatives.

Mr. Felton agreed with Mr. Abrams, but asked what the data reflected for African-American and Hispanic students who are not in poverty. Dr. Weast replied that most of the African-American and Hispanic population (70 percent) is highly concentrated in the 56 attendance zones. The other 30 percent is scattered across the county. These minority populations have increased the number of students taking the SAT and have increase the number of students with high scores. The predictor for high scores on the SAT test is whether or not second grade students are challenged with initiatives. There are three things that must be accomplished: (1) stay the course, (2) continue the initiatives, and (3) help students who have not had the initiatives.

Mr. Felton noted that middle school parents understand the commitment, but their children only have a few short years left of their public schooling. Mr. Burnett remarked that algebra is being offered in the seventh grade to prepare them for their tests in high school. Efforts are being made to look at the children in the “gap.”

Mr. Abrams argued that the discussion pointed out there was a need for multiple strategies. The long-term strategy of systemic change does not need to be revised. However, in the interim, the question for the students who do not get the initiatives is twofold – (1) what kind of interventions can be made and (2) what standards can measure the progress for those interventions. It is not that the “gap” exists, but whether those students who have not had the benefit of the initiatives are making progress with intermediate interventions. All of the reports on the SAT scores contain same old analysis, and it is incumbent upon the school system to educate the community. Also, the press, commentators, and researchers must remember that the 2001 SAT scores reflect students who got their grounding under policies that existed in 1987-88. Until that message is learned, it is hard to evaluate the progress of a contemporary school system.

Dr. Weast remarked that the “gap” will get greater before it starts to narrow. The reason is that the rigor has increased district wide, and those with the initiatives are moving at a faster pace. For the groups that are not doing well, there is a strategy of interventions with summer school, extended learning at the middle school, training, consistent supervision, and shared accountability.

Mr. Abrams thought the mantra has changed from raise the bar and close the gap to raise the bar and eventually close the gap. Dr. Weast replied that teachers want to raise the bar for everyone and have different ways to help reach that bar.

Mr. Burnett thought the system could do a better job of emphasizing that parental involvement is essential to student achievement.

Mrs. O’Neill noted that parents are not always focused on the SAT, but students must take it for college. There is a need to talk about college from kindergarten through high school, and there is a need to educate parents about building capacity in each child. Also, the SAT verbal score is built on a lifetime of reading.

Ms. Cox remarked that it had to be a two-way communication and not just the school system giving direction to parents. It is hard for parents to gain access to information that would be helpful for them to partner with the school system to improve student achievement.

Mrs. King noticed that when talking to children about going to college, there should be the recognition that poor families do not expect that it will be a possible to afford college for their children. There is a need to develop partnerships to allow more students to attend college.

Mr. Lange stated that an issue that was emerging through the ombudsman was the need for parental access and clarity for parents on what they are expected to do, regardless of socioeconomic backgrounds.

Mr. Felton thought that the one point to remember was the importance of a list of indicators to help the community, Board, and parents understand student achievement. Dr. Weast stated that the list was available with color-coded indicators by school. Also, there are translated parent brochures on how to access the system, what to look for, and what questions to ask.

Ms. Cox asked if there was a way to evaluate the effectiveness of the brochure developed for the African-American parents.

Mr. Alnifaidy left the meeting at this point.

Re: ORAL REPORT ON THE OPENING OF SCHOOLS

Dr. Weast introduced the item with the four essential questions: (1) what do students need to know and be able to do, (2) how does the school system know when they have learned it, (3) what will MCPS do when they haven’t, and (4) what will the school system do when they already know it.

Staff continued the presentation and emphasized that staff had:
1. Developed a framework for improving teaching and learning
2. Focused on preparing staff in a myriad of ways
3. Trained for strategic professional growth
4. Set skillful course work
5. Started school with ELO experience, and students know the routine
6. Knew the curriculum and teach with consistency
7. Excited parents with information about curriculum and homework objectives
8. Learned from the Summer Institute
9. Focused on instruction, conversation, and accountability with a common language
10. Planned for successful instruction
11. Built a professional learning community
12. Participated in skillful teacher classes to learn the latest teaching strategies

Re: DISCUSSION

Mrs. King was impressed with the classroom instruction and the common language used by teachers. The teachers are excited, ready to teach, and confident.

Mr. Felton talked about the capacity of the school system to support teachers and schools. National and local comments indicate that there is no need for a central office with too many people. However, there is benefit and added value if the central office supports teachers for improved student achievement. How does that message get to the community? Ms. Merry replied that the central office has been streamlined, and the focus is on building high performing local school teams. Dr. Weast believed that parents will make the connection when they observe their local school in action. If there is a demand from teachers, students and parents for more of what the school system is doing, the evidence is clear that there is a need to build more capacity as well as enable and support staff to engage in courageous conversations about academic achievement for students.
Mr. Felton asked how the school system will ensure that parents and the local community understand the capacity of the school system to support teachers, and it is necessary to have that capacity. Mr. Porter thought this could be done by working through stakeholders and engaging parents in discussions about the school system.

Ms. Cox asked if parents were involved in developing the school improvement plan. Do they understand the support of the central office? Staff replied that parents are involved in the planning, and parents are learning the language and organizational structure.

Mrs. O’Neill wanted clarification about the vertical articulation specialists and their duties. Staff replied that the specialist observes the entire program, kindergarten through grade 12, connects the curriculum, and helps with planning and staff development training.

Mr. Burnett inquired if the information shared with the Board would be available at back-to-school nights. Staff replied that they want parents to know the language and be prepared to help their children.

Mr. Lange thought that folks do not realize the commitment, energy, and time that goes into educating children. It is important that the community at large recognizes the value of staff development.

Re: ORAL UPDATE ON TITLE I ENROLLMENT OPTION

Staff members summarized the option as mandated by No Child Left Behind. They started with the definition of a school that needed improvement and said only Title I schools were subject to the standard of declining for two consecutive years. MCPS had 10 such schools. All children in those schools were eligible to transfer, with priority given to those students who were both low income and low achieving. Transportation is provided. The schools chosen to receive the Title I students were those that exceeded the state’s school performance index average, school capacity, and transportation distance. Outreach efforts included meeting with the principals, letters sent to families (translated into the appropriate language), a brochure, school newsletters, community meetings, and newspaper and television reports. The application deadline was June 10, and 110 students were approved for transfer. Those students have been welcomed at the receiving schools. The next step is to strengthen the instructional programs at all Title I schools.

Ms. Cox asked if the process would be modified to include multiple receiving schools. Ms. Muntner replied that it is not clear at this time.

Mr. Felton noted that the concern was that low-income students in low-performing schools would not take advantage of the option. What is being done to ensure that those families are aware of the option? Staff replied that a letter was sent to every family with well-advertised community meetings. The meetings were well attended by a broad spectrum of parents. Dr. Williams stated that most parents want to stay with the school and help improve the school to make a better community.

Re: ORAL UPDATE ON EXTENDED LEARNING OPPORTUNITIES (ELO)

Staff reported that it was an amazing program this summer. There were 18 schools engaged in a rigorous program with an outstanding curriculum, 59 percent of the students enrolled, 79 percent attended regularly, staff was trained, 300 volunteers participated, 144,00 meals were served; and free transportation was offered. There were pre- and post-assessments in reading and math which will be analyzed.

Mr. Lange asked for a description of the 300 volunteers. Staff said that there is a planned outreach to keep them involved in the school system and that the volunteers were students through grandparents.

Ms. Cox reported that she had visited EOL, and there were lesson plans for each day with consistency throughout EOL.
