

Tutoring Opportunities at WJ – from Counseling Services

Updated for the 2015-2016 School Year

Counselors recommend students always first seek help from their own teachers. Teachers already personally know them and recognize their individual learning needs. Teachers have the advantage of knowing what coursework is being taught and what assignments are pending. Most teachers are available in their classrooms at lunch, and often before or after school. Teachers ask that students show courtesy by making an “informal” appointment so there are no hard feelings if a teacher is not available because of another commitment.

In cases where it is not working out for students to get help from their own teacher, a number of tutoring options are available at WJ.

WJ’s Writing Lab: WJ writing assistance is available. Students should make arrangements with their English teachers to receive assistance with writing assessments assigned by the teacher. The composition assistants in the English office and/or the teacher will schedule a time to meet during lunch to offer assistance.
